Report of Grand Jury

The grand jury serving November term, 1909, having visited the County House and Jail, reports as follows:

The jail we found in good condition as to cleanliness and accommodations, but would recommend a little light on cloudy days.

The County House is in very neat, tidy and clean condition; we would recommend renewing floors, which are badly worn, some repairing to plastering and to closets. The Court House we find in fair condition.

J. H. Snowberger, Foreman.

Espy Kneec

This community was startled last Friday morning, November 5, by the death of Espy Kneec, as the boy was at school the day before and seemed in his usual health. He was subject to spasms and had two the night before.

After preparing breakfast, Mrs. Kneec went up stairs to waken the rest of the family and found Espy dead. He was 14 years, one month and 15 days of age, was a very bright boy, and a favorite among his associates. He leaves to mourn their loss his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kneec, and the following brothers and sisters: Florence, John, Vesta, George, Charles, Margaret, Ralph and Ruth.

Interment in the Bortz Lutheran Cemetery Sunday at 11 a. m., Rev. Bonn officiating. The church was over crowded.

Centerville, November 9.

Mrs. Frank Casteel

Mrs. Nellie Pearl Casteel was born September 15, 1886, at Chaneyville, and died November 3, 1909, at Clearville. She was a daughter of Josiah and Ellen Adams.

About four years ago she was married to Frank Casteel at Clearville. Two sons, Walter H. and Chester E., with her husband, parents and the following brothers and sister, survive: William, Jacob, Frank and Albert Adams, of Chaneyville, and Mrs. Ash of Flintstone, Md.

The funeral took place Friday morning in the Clearville Union Church, the services being conducted by Rev. D. G. Hetrick of the Reformed Church, assisted by Rev. Sloaner of the Lutheran Church.

MINISTERIUM MEETING

Association Doing Good Work—Excellent Program.

The Reformed Ministerial Association of Bedford County met in the parlors of the National House on Monday, with Rev. J. A. Eyer in the chair and the following members present: Revs. C. Gumbert, J. C. Knable, E. A. G. Hermann, F. B. Rupp and J. W. Zehring. Two new members were added to the list, Rev. E. M. Adair of Mann's Choice and Rev. Calvin Skyles of Loysburg. These two latter brethren have lately become pastors of the Sulphur Springs and Yellow Creek churches, respectively.

The first item on the literary part of the program was a paper by Rev. Zehring on "Church Advertising." The subject was presented in a very able manner and elicited much discussion on the part of the members present. The preponderance of opinion being, however, that if church advertising be legitimately done it will be helpful.

The second item was a sermon by Rev. Knable on Acts 1: 8, "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you." The sermon was commented upon by the members of the association and many helpful suggestions were given to the sermonizer who, by the way, is not accustomed to writing sermons.

The last topic was a book review by Rev. Hermann, on Horton's book, "My Belief." This was an exhaustive review on the first five chapters of the book, and was made in a scholarly way, the only regret being that the lack of time prevented an exhaustive discussion on the review. The association seems to be taking on new life and is in a measure atoning for the apathy during the vacation months. May the good work go on!

Secretary.

Paul Wright

Thursday evening, November 4, Paul Wright, an aged citizen of sixty-nine years, died of heart disease at his home on West Pitt Street.

Mr. Wright was born in McConnellsbury, Fulton County, and was the son of William Wright. On August 5, 1862, he enlisted and was mustered into the United States service at Harrisburg as a private in Company B, 126th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. May 20, 1863, he was honorably discharged and re-enlisted in September 1864 in Company A, 56th Regiment, Pennsylvania Veteran Volunteers.

On October 11, 1863, Mr. Wright was married to Miss Laura Shuck, daughter of the late Josiah Shuck of Bedford, who survives with five sons: William of Duncansville, Charles of Duquesne, George of Johnstown, Daniel of Philadelphia, John of Pittsburg, and one daughter, Mrs. Lillie Hill, of Philadelphia.

Deceased was a man of upright character, a kind husband and father and a loyal citizen. The funeral services were conducted at his late residence on Monday at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, Rev. F. W. Biddle of the Methodist Church officiating. Interment in Bedford Cemetery.

William Smouse

William Smouse died on November 3 at his home in Everett at the age of 34 years, six months and seven days.

Deceased was a millwright and pattern maker and spent most of his life in Everett. In 1872 he was married to Miss Hannah Gilliam who, with two children, survives—Charles F. and Mrs. S. S. Leach, both of that place. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock last Friday afternoon, Rev. C. D. Russell conducting the services. He was a member of the Reformed Church.

Mrs. Martha J. Stally

Mrs. Martha J. Stally, aged 66 years, seven months and 19 days, died on Monday, November 8, at her home in East Providence Township.

Deceased was a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Binard and was born in the township in which she died. Her husband, William Augustus Stally, died a number of years ago. The following children survive: H. E. Stally and Mrs. J. E. Schleigh, of Everett; Mrs. Elmer Seader, Mrs. George Felton, West Virginia, and M. N. Stally of Breezewood.

She also leaves a number of brothers and sisters: Sylvester of Bedford, William and J. H. of West Virginia; Mrs. J. L. Bowers of Lewisburg, and Mrs. Samuel Grove, Mrs. J. V. Smith, and Mrs. J. H. Stoutenour, all of Everett.

The funeral was held at Breezewood yesterday afternoon, Rev. H. M. Petrea conducting the services. Interment at that place.

Mrs. Sarah E. Henry

Mrs. Sarah E. Henry, an aged and highly respected resident of Everett, passed away at her home in that place on Friday, November 5, after a brief illness.

She was a daughter of John Wheeler and Elizabeth (Piper) Smith and was born in Hopewell Township on December 14, 1824. Her parents dying when Mrs. Henry was a child, she was reared by her uncle, General Piper. Dr. James Henry, her husband, died on October 4, 1879.

Of the five children born to them, only one survives, Dr. W. P. S. Henry of Everett. She also leaves four grandchildren: J. W. Miss Sallie and Robert James Henry, of Everett, and Robert Wilson of Lewistown.

Rev. M. G. Clayton of the Presbyterian Church conducted the funeral services which were held Monday afternoon. Interment in the Everett Cemetery.

HELPFUL HINTS ON

HAIR HEALTH

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how clean the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hatband is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Bedford only at our store,—The Rexall Store. F. W. Jordan.

RECIPES

Mock Cherry Pie

One cup of cranberries, one-half cup raisins. Chop together, add two-thirds cup of sugar, one-half cup water, one tablespoon of flour and tea-spoon of vanilla. Bake in two crusts.

Walnut Wafers

Beat two eggs until light, then add one-half pound light brown sugar that has been rolled fine, one-half pound of chopped nuts, three even teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Drop small spoonfuls on buttered pans and bake until light brown.

Fruit Cake

One cup butter, one of brown sugar, one-half pint molasses, two eggs, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, one pound of flour, one pound currants, one and one-half pounds raisins. Flavor to taste. This has been thoroughly tested and is a great favorite.

NO CASE ON RECORD

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and break up your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Washing New Flannels

It is surprising how a little care in washing new flannel lengthens its life and preserves its appearance. First of all, put the garment or the piece of flannel into a large tub filled with cold water, rain water where obtainable, but otherwise with a little ammonia added. The water must be cold; no other method will extract the sulphur which is contained in all new flannels. Steep it for at least two hours. Have ready a tub of hot, not boiling, water, add a little soap jelly (too much soap makes flannel shiny) and a tablespoonful of ammonia. Put the flannel into this and rub lightly with the hands, giving extra attention to seams, gathers and thick places. Wash again through warm water with a smaller quantity of soap jelly in it, and rinse in tepid water. Pass twice through the wringer, and hang out-of-doors, if possible, with the thickest and heaviest part uppermost. This precaution is necessary, otherwise the water drains into the yoke, collar or waistband and thickens those parts. Fine flannel may be pressed with a moderately hot iron on the wrong side, but heavy garments are usually mangled.—"Household Information and Economics," in The Ladies' World for November.

There is nothing so good for all kidney troubles as Pinesalve, the new kidney remedy. Pinesalve acts promptly in relieving backache, weak back, pain in the bladder and all urinary disorders. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Sport Notes

"Many a man," said Uncle Eben, "thinks he's havin' a tremendous big time as a sport when he is merely goin' through 'de imitation of de 'Down-and-Out-Club.'"

FARM NOTES

When packing apples do as you would be done by.

A weed killed now means 100 fewer weeds next spring.

Plow up the old strawberry bed if it is failing and start a new one.

Store early dug potatoes in a cool, dry place. Do not put in the cellar.

Allowing a potato to take a second growth spoils it for eating purposes.

How many raisers test the eggs they guarantee to be fresh?

When a hen is not kept well she can't be expected to do well.

It is said to be best to start raising poultry in the fall rather than in spring.

Make the best of what room you have, but above all things don't try to keep too many fowls on a small place.

Plowing the orchard late encourages late growth of wood which is apt to winterkill.

Letting weeds go to seed means that you are laying up trouble for next year.

The dog industry and the sheep industry never go well together.

Bedford people endorse this:

Mrs. Samuel Whetstone, John St., Bedford, Pa., says: "It was three years ago that I was cured of kidney trouble by Doan's Kidney Pills. I was feeling very nervous and depressed at the time I began their use and was suffering from severe pains in the small of my back. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Dull's Drug Store and they removed the pains, also gave me renewed strength. Finally the trouble left me entirely and I have not had a return of it since. I am glad to acknowledge the benefit I derived from Doan's Kidney Pills."

Reckless Jerry and Uncle Joe

Jerry Simpson loved to work off jokes on prominent men who "got after" him. He and Joe Cannon, now Speaker, had many lively tilts. One day Jerry made a lip-smacking anti-expansion speech in the House; just the kind that a Populist like Jerry could make.

"Had you made that speech in Manila," said Cannon, getting the floor and leveling his finger at the Kansas Congressman, "you would have been tried by a drumhead court-martial and shot."

"Well," replied Jerry, "I would just as leave be shot in Manila for making a speech of that kind as to be shot in Congress by an old smooth-bore brass Cannon from Illinois."

That reply tickled Tom Reed so much that he came up to Jerry and said:

"That was all right, Jerry; I forgive you a lot of things for that."—Kansas City Journal.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Either a little kerosene or a bit of soap will stop the squeaking of the door hinge.

To keep lettuce over night, put it in a cheesecloth bag and place on the ice or in a cold cellar.

When ready to core apples, if you do not own a corer, use a common wooden clothes pin—does the work just as well.

After scraping fish, rub the steel knife over an old lemon peel, and it will destroy all fish odor.

The white of one egg "cut" with white vinegar makes an excellent leather furniture polish.

Kitchen faucets are quickly cleaned with any acid, such as lemon, salts of tartar, etc. Ammonia and washing powder are excellent cleaners.

Dish mops can be kept odorless only by putting them in a solution of soda water.

Do not attempt to use sour or moldy flour. Dry it out in the oven and save it for starch.

Cold water, a tablespoonful of ammonia and soap will remove machine grease when other means would not answer on account of colors running.

To kill cockroaches put a mixture of flour and plaster of paris in places infested by cockroaches. The creatures will eat it greedily. The plaster of paris "sets" after they have eaten it and kills them.

Panes of glass may be easily removed by applying soft soap to the putty which holds them. Leave the soap on for a few hours before attempting to remove the putty, which, however hard it may be, will rarely fail to soften under the treatment.

A Religious Author's Statement

Rev. Joseph H. Fesperman, Salisbury, N. C., who is the author of several books, writes: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy."—Ed. D. Heckerman.

Death Cuts List

Washington, D. C.—Death's invasion of the fast thinning ranks of war veterans caused 48,312 names to be dropped from the pension rolls of the United States last year. Of this number, 32,831 were survivors of the Civil War. The total loss to the pension roll from all causes was 51,581.

In striking contrast to these figures, comprised in the annual report of Commissioner of Pensions Warner, is the statement that the government paid out in pensions in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1909, $161,973,703, which the commissioner declared is the largest amount ever disbursed for pensions in one year.

Summarized, the report shows these facts: Number of pensioners at the beginning of the year, 951,687; number of new pensioners added to the roll, 46,088; pensioners on roll at close of the year, 946,194, a net decrease of 5,493; survivors of the Civil War on the roll now number 393,961.

JIMMY'S OPPORTUNITY.

A Very Important Conversation That Settled Matters.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.
(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

Jimmy Fitzgerald was downcast. Everybody was against him, he told himself, and in that sweeping generalization he included even Carroll. For it had not been for Carroll's connivance, her tame submission to the maneuvers of interfering relatives, the words which had trembled on his lips for three dragging months would have been spoken long ago.

From the standpoint of a disinterested spectator Jimmy was ready to admire the cleverness which so far had circumvented him. "Good team work," he denominated it. The ingenious air with which Grandmother Reynolds would appear to claim Carroll's assistance in regard to a dropped stitch in her knitting just when Jimmy was bringing matters to a climax and Carroll was turning a most becoming pink was only equaled by the childlike innocence with which Carroll's small brother would rush bawling into the library with a bloody handkerchief held to his nose, interrupting an eloquent outbreak beginning "Since the first hour I saw you—"

In Jimmy's estimation this was all the harder to bear because he was so perfectly eligible. Character and prospects alike were beyond question. The most serious accusation that could be brought against the match was that both of them were young. Carroll's sister, Marie, was of the opinion that an engagement would be absurd, and Jimmy thought he knew why. If George Freeman, Marie's latest admirer, had been as eager to propose as Jimmy was, the latter young man felt positive that no obstacles would be put in his way.

With a duplicity foreign to his usually frank nature, Jimmy lost no opportunity of expressing to Freeman the admiration with which Marie inspired him. If the older sister were once engaged or, better still, married, Jimmy believed there would be hope for him.

Meanwhile the family opposition showed itself in a system of espionage which kept Jimmy's great avowal unspoken. If he suggested a walk, either Mrs. Reynolds declared that Carroll's cold would not permit her to venture out or Marie invited herself to accompany them; if the theater, a chaperon was necessary. Whole souled co-operation on Carroll's part would have relieved the situation, but the girl knew so well what Jimmy wanted that her modesty shrank from giving him anything but the most negative assistance. Accordingly Jimmy decided that she, too, was against him and gave himself up to thoughts of unutterable gloom.

He called one afternoon wearing an expression of grim determination which, if he had known it, put the conspirators on their guard. He was ushered into the family living room, and Mrs. Reynolds entertained him till Carroll came down. Jimmy made a few inane comments on the weather, his eyes devouring the pretty girlish figure seated demurely in the opposite corner.

"It's too fine a day for the house," said Jimmy. "Suppose we take a little walk."

"Really, Carroll, dear," said Mrs. Reynolds before Carroll could reply, "it won't do for you to leave the house. Mrs. Baker is likely to want you any moment. We have a dressmaker here. Mr. Fitzgerald," she continued, turning to Jimmy with her most charming smile.

"Can't we sit on the piazza?" suggested Jimmy. Carroll agreed to the suggestion. But, as it proved, her small brother, Bob, was in possession of the hammock, and he remained for two hours, enlivening the occasion by describing the exploits of the ball team.

An ear splitting whistle in the rear of the house relieved them at length of Bob's company. Without delay Jimmy plunged into the subject uppermost in his mind.

"Carroll, there's something I want to say to you."

"Carroll, Mrs. Baker is ready for you," said Marie's voice behind the parlor shutters. That she had been waiting there, biding her time, Jimmy could not doubt. Then the gate clicked, and Mr. Reynolds came up the walk. He settled himself in the chair Carroll had vacated, and he and Jimmy talked politics till dinner time.

The young man refused an invitation to remain to dinner. He went away with a lowering brow and a heavy heart. But at half past 9 that evening the telephone bell rang, interrupting a game of bridge going on in the den. Carroll, who was nearest to the insistent instrument, pushed back her chair and went to answer the summons.

"Hello—hello! Oh, yes, this is Carroll." She turned a pretty, flushed face toward the three at the card table. "Please don't talk for a minute. I can't hear."

The next minute she heard very distinctly, for the room had become absolutely still, and the voice at the other end of the wire was clear and penetrating.

"This is Jimmy, Carroll. There's something I've been trying to say to you for three months. And I'm going to say it now."

"Why, I don't see!"

"Well, it doesn't matter whether you see or not. Just listen. Ever since I

A Breakfast for Five Costs Only 10c

All the wealth in the world could buy nothing finer for breakfast than Beardsley's Shredded Codfish.

This forms the favorite morning meal in many a millionaire's home. And dozens of dishes made from it are on the breakfast and luncheon menus of this country's most expensive hotels.

Yet more than enough for five hungry people will cost you only 10 cents.

And there's nothing easier to prepare. You can have it ready for the table—cooked to the Queen's taste—in less than 10 minutes.

The Incomparable Flavor

Lots of people like Beardsley's Shredded Codfish so well that they eat it right out of the package—before it is cooked.

This doesn't taste at all like the old-fashioned dried codfish.

And you'll find a vast difference between this and all other codfish in packages.

We use only the choicest fish—the plumpest and fattest.

We get them from Northern waters. The fish which feed here attain a superlative flavor.

And we take only the choicest parts of each fish—the sweetest, most delicate meat.

Better Than New Laid Eggs

Your folks will find Beardsley's Shredded Codfish a welcome change from meat or eggs.

It is richer in food value than either.

THE PACKAGE WITH THE RED BAND
Lined with wax-paper. No preservative whatever, save the purest and finest sea-salt. Also packed in tin and glass.

Some of Our Other Pure Food Products:
Acme Sliced Bacon; Acme Sliced Dried Beef; Star Brand Boneless Herring.

It contains 22 per cent protein. Sirloin steak only 17 per cent. Eggs only 12 1-2. Protein is the strengthening, nourishing element in food.

And see what you save by serving it.

A package of this—plenty for five—costs only ten cents.

Eggs or meat for five cost three or four times as much.

Have It Tomorrow

—“Fish-Day”

Surprise your folks tomorrow morning—“fish-day”—with this delicious food.

When they find out how good it is, they'll want it at least once a week.

There are so many appetizing ways to prepare it, that no one can ever tire of it.

Breakfast Ready in 10 Minutes

Beardsley's Shredded Codfish is no bother at all to prepare.

No bones to pick out—no washing—no soaking—no boiling.

It's so fine and fluffy and dainty that it cooks in less than ten minutes.

Get a package today from your grocer. Be sure it's Beardsley's—the package with the red band. Beardsley's is the only Shredded Codfish. No other kind will taste half so good.

Free Book of Recipes

Ask your grocer for our free book of recipes—so you'll know how to bring out all the fine flavor.

Or write us—we'll send you the book—and with it a generous sample of Beardsley's Shredded Codfish.

met you on Phil Reynolds' yacht a year ago I've loved you—from the very first hour."

"Oh, hush!"

"I'm not going to hush. I think about you every minute while I'm awake and dream about you when I'm asleep. I'm not any good any more, and I shan't be till I find out whether you care for me or not. And if you don't I'm going to the Philippines or somewhere."

"Don't talk so loud."

"I don't care who hears me. I've kept it to myself just as long as I can. Carroll, darling, can't you care for me a little?"

"Sh! Come tomorrow."

"I'll come tomorrow fast enough if you tell me what I want to hear. Haven't I been coming day after day for months without getting a chance to tell you that I love the very ground you walk on? And now I've got it I'm going to wait till you say yes or no. If you can't love me I might as well—"

Abruptly the voice ceased. Carroll waited expectantly. Then a terrible suspicion flashed through her mind which in a moment had become a certainty. Tremulously she accused the operator. "You've cut me off."

The best, most pleasant, easiest and safest pill is Rings Little Liver Pills. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

"What number do you want?" replied that young woman.

"Oh, I don't know. I haven't any idea. Oh, why did you cut me off just then?"

The trio at the card table were staring at her strangely. "How absurdly you are acting, Carroll," exclaimed Marie sharply. "Come and finish the game."

"Yes, come and finish the game, Carroll," said her sister. "The other matter can be settled another time. I hope."

"We've got 'em on the run. Miss Carroll," chuckled George Freeman, who happened to be Carroll's partner.

Slowly the girl moved toward her place. What would Jimmy think? Perhaps he would believe that she had deliberately hung up the receiver, preferring this way of giving him his answer. And he had spoken of the Philippines. She grew a little dizzy and groped for her chair.

Just at that moment the telephone rang again, and Carroll bounded toward it, her agility in surprising contrast to her late uncertainty and feebleness.

"Hello! Hello!"

"Hello, Jimmy. I will. I mean I do."

A long pause. "I suppose it's too late for me to come up this evening," suggested Jimmy tentatively.

"Of course not. Only hurry." She hung up the receiver and turned a radiant face. Again Marie looked suspicious.

"That must have been a very important conversation," she said scathingly. "I hope it's settled now."

Carroll answered her with a dignity in which there was no suggestion of the downtrodden younger sister.

"It is," she replied. "Jimmy and I are engaged."

His Rivals

In Turkey it often happens that marriages are arranged affairs—arranged by the parents of the man and the woman. Such was the case, says Demetra Vaka in Haremlik, with Halli Bey and his bride. They had never seen each other, and at first it did not look as if the match would be a good one, since the lady was buried deep in German philosophies, in which the gentleman had little interest.

By the time I had parted from Halli Bey's fiancée I was so filled up with high ideals that I kept thinking, "Poor Halli Bey!"

The next morning I found Halli Bey in the garden, very impatient to hear all about his fiancée.

"Tell me," he cried out as soon as we had shaken hands, "is she beautiful?"

"Very," I answered, "but, my poor boy, she is crazy over Kant and Schopenhauer."

"Who are they?" he bellowed, thunder in his voice and fire in his eyes. "Tell me quick, and I will draw every drop of blood from their veins!"

"I have no doubt," I said, "that in a first to first encounter you would have the best of them, but they are both dead and gone, and only their miserable books are left to fight against."

"Oh," he laughed, "is that all? I think I can take care of that."

As events turned out, he did.

How the Burmese Made Fire

One day a Burmese messenger brought me a note. While he was waiting for the reply I observed an object something like a boy's popgun suspended around his waist. On asking what it was he showed me that it was an implement for producing fire. It was a rude example of a scientific instrument employed by lecturers at home to illustrate the production of heat by suddenly compressed air. A piston fitted into the tube. The former was hollowed at the lower end and smeared with wax to receive a piece of cotton or tinder, which when pressed into it adhered. The tube was closed at one end. Placing the piston at the top of the tube, with a smart blow he struck it down and immediately withdrew it with the tinder on fire, the sudden compression of the air having ignited it. I was so much struck with the scientific ingenuity of this rude implement that I procured it from the Burman and sent it to the Asiatic society of Bengal, with a short description of its uses—"Recollections of My Life," by Surgeon General Sir John Fayer.

Troubles Due to Legacy

We have never known any good to come of a legacy. Henry got $500 in the mail one day, and his troubles began on the spot. He bought a horse. The horse kicked one of the children and ran away, breaking up an eighty dollar buggy. Henry sold the animal for half what he had paid for it and bought him an amber stemmed pipe and a gasoline route with the remains of his fortune. The first day out he bit the stem of his pipe in two, the falling sparks set the gasoline afire, and the wagon was entirely consumed. To comfort himself Henry got drunk, and that night he fell off the bridge into the creek, ruining his best suit of clothes. When the legacy got through with him he was $33 in the hole.—Newark News

Pimples, Blackheads, Eczema, Etc. QUICKLY CURED.

"It is astonishing," remarked a well known authority on Diseases of the skin, "how such a large number of people, especially ladies, are, by attractively written advertisements, induced to purchase some one of the many so-called Beauty Creams now on the market, not knowing, of course, that they mostly contain oily or greasy substances that clog the pores of the skin and are, for that reason, the very worst thing that they could possibly use. My treatment of Pimples, Blackheads, Blisters and all eruptions of the skin, is as follows, and has invariably proved very successful: Wash the face carefully every night before retiring with warm water and a little oat meal tied up in a small cloth bag, then, after drying well, use the following inexpensive and perfectly harmless prescription, which can be filled at any Drug Store: Clearola ½ oz., Ether 1 oz., Alcohol 7 ounces. Use this mixture on the face as often as possible during the day, but use night and morning anyway, allowing it to remain on the face at least ten minutes, then the powdery film may be wiped off. Do not wash the face for some little time after using. By following this simple treatment, you will soon have a clear, Brilliant Complexion."

MR. NICHOLSON'S LETTER

Elsewhere in this issue appears a letter from Rev. S. E. Nicholson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of the state, which designates The Gazette's editorial of last week on "The Anti-Saloon League" as "such a veritable fabrication and misrepresentation of the position of the League that I cannot fail to condemn it as such."

In the editorial in question we charged representatives of the League with trying to get Mr. Huff's name off the ticket and, in general, of playing into the hands of the Republican party.

Mr. Nicholson says the League at no time took the position that Mr. Huff should withdraw, yet in a signed article printed in The Gazette of October 29, written by a member of the conference which met here a few days previous to that date, we find this statement:

On the Saturday preceding the conference there came to Saxton a personal messenger and telephone messages as well as personal letters stating that the object of this convention was to secure the withdrawal of Mr. Huff and the endorsement of Mr. Foor. * * * But for the trustworthiness of the informants we would have thought it an idle tale, but coming to Bedford we soon found it practically true that such a plan was actually thought of and advocated.

Mr. Nicholson arranged for this meeting and if he will give a full and true account of the proceedings, telling why one of the conferees selected by Mr. Huff was rejected; why Mr. Foor was not present but was directed to wait to be called—in the office of Congressman Reynolds—and why his whereabouts were denied and why he could not be reached on the phone which he says did not ring; why he, Mr. Nicholson, went first into a private conference with a party or parties who were not conferees selected by Mr. Huff, and a number of other things not necessary to mention now—if he will furnish such an account of the conference or rather conferences we will gladly print it, as we this week print his letter.

We charged that the League was in a measure responsible for the election of Oster, and as a proof we need only to cite the speech of Mr. Davis in one of the churches of the town which clearly showed the drift, but this is not denied, neither is the statement that the League favored Reynolds—in whose office Foor waited—as against Thropp a few years ago, hence we drop the past and come to the recent campaign.

We did not and do not assert that all representatives of the League either openly or privately favored Mr. Foor, but we do know that some of those closely connected and who were in conference did. This inclination was shown in different degrees, but even in its mildest form the inference could be drawn by discerning minds. It was shown from thinly veiled remarks to the open declaration in at least one instance, that Huff was not in the fight; that it lay between Foor and Bair, and, therefore, the duty of the temperance voter was plain. For this action of agents and members the League is responsible.

We know, and we assume Mr. Nicholson knows that a field agent went through the county several weeks before the election and endeavored to create a sentiment in favor of Mr. Huff's withdrawal.

The rumor was afloat here previous to the conference of October 23 that the result of the conference would be the withdrawal of Mr. Huff. And further, this intelligence was conveyed from here by phone by one intimately connected with the League. If Mr. Nicholson will reveal who are his trusted advisers in this county the annex theory may be the more apparent.

Will Mr. Nicholson deny that previous to his coming here for the conference he talked with a certain man over the phone and expressed himself as believing that the logic of the situation would indicate that Foor was the stronger man and that Huff ought to withdraw? What led him to such a conclusion?

Is it denied that the lieutenants of the League, in the face of conditions known to those who cared to know, tried to leave the impression that the Republican organization was a unit in the support of Mr. Foor, and that, therefore, he was the stronger man.

Human motives are hidden from mortal gaze; God alone knows the hearts of men. Humanity judges motives by acts alone, just as it knows a tree by its fruit. If the Anti-Saloon League would get and hold the confidence of the voters of this county it must show its singleness of purpose by its acts.

If Mr. Nicholson has been misled by men who color their statements to accomplish their ends he lacks in knowledge of men and in ability to lead in so great a work.

PHILADELPHIA POLITICS

Few are the people in this county who have not heard and read of the political methods of the Philadelphia gang, but it requires something like the knocking to the floor with a blackjack of one whom we know, a young man from our county and our town, to give us an adequate conception of what really takes place there on election day.

With the systematized ballot-box stuffing and organized thuggery it is practically impossible to defeat the gang in the city and the same gang largely rules the state.

Not until a quickened sense of duty arouses the voters of the interior and more thinly settled counties of the state to repulse the iniquitous combine will the state be free, and not until the state as a whole is out of its octopus grasp will it be possible for Philadelphia to secure anything like reasonable government.

The following story of his being beaten and locked up by Schell Ridenour, a clean young man, who took the risk of being a Penn watcher, that he might assist in securing a fair election, ought to make some persons who have been giving that same gang the support of their votes stop and think. Mr. Ridenour's account speaks for itself, and is as follows:

At 7 o'clock all the Penn party watchers were in front of the polls, but were refused admittance. The doors were not opened to the voters until 13 minutes after 7. A mob had collected. Besides myself there were Acker, the Kelly brothers, Leonard Staats, D. A. Albright and Alfred Coombs, watchers for the Penn party. Charles McConnell, the Organization division leader, showed us into the line and ordered us to wait until about a dozen strangers voted. As soon as we had voted we demanded to see the inside of the ballot box. McConnell ordered the lid taken off and then grabbed me and thrust me toward the can. I did not see the bottom of the can, however, for he jerked me away as suddenly as he had thrust me forward.

A man giving his name as Andrew Rogers appeared next and we challenged his right to vote. Our objections were sustained, but the most remarkable scene ensued. Another man, Charles Hall, desired to vote, and we also challenged him. Rogers, against whom our objections were sustained, was then permitted to vouch for Hall, and the word of Rogers was taken as sufficient reason why Hall's vote should be accepted.

We challenged several others and were told to keep quiet. Finally one Thomas Campbell, who was registered from the rear of 1310 Cherry Street, where there is no house, by the way, asked to vote. George Kelly challenged him. Campbell then cursed Kelly and ran toward him. Before Kelly was aware of Campbell's intentions he was struck in the face and Kelly fell back against the wall. With an oath, Campbell kicked at Kelly and was about to strike him again. I seized Campbell's arm and appealed to John McCluskey, the judge of election, for aid. McCluskey and the entire board left their places and the room was filled with men as if by magic. Then I was struck with a blackjack. The blow came from the rear and I fell. I remember nothing more until I found myself huddled in a corner with Acker stretched across the doorway. I attempted to rise, but was kicked. After several attempts to gain my feet I grasped the leg of the table and pulled myself to my knees. I was then thrown across the still unconscious Acker and thrust outside.

They were taken to the Hahnemann Hospital and their wounds dressed, then thrust into a patrol wagon, denied the privilege of telephoning their employers, and taken to the Station House, where they were detained until evening, the officers denying their presence and the officials refusing to act. Such is the method of conducting elections in Jim McNichol's ward and in Philadelphia.

Comments on the Election by "Justice"

Everybody knows the election is over but some do not know just what happened. If you doubt this statement read the county papers of last week. Or better, get a peep at some of the letters that people are writing confessing their mistakes and trying to get in out of the wet. It's mighty poor comfort to a man to come and say to him, "Well I was going to vote for you or your man but somebody told me the other man was the stronger and I voted for him." That reminds me of the man at the spelling bee who spelled "arm" o-r-m. After the laugh was over he said "I was going to spell that word a-r-m but Pres, my brother, said it was o-r-m and as he was a good speller I spelled it the way he told me. Moral: Don't tell a man something as a fact that you do not know yourself. And, brother, ask a man for his credentials before you let him take you in. Fewer apologies and explanations would now be required if a good many people in and around Bedford and a few other places had followed this advice. A famous American Bishop once said "When a man runs a private wire to the top of his egotism and thinks he is talking with God, I distrust his judgment."

There is one town in the county where the rejoicing is sincere and the "I told you so" expression can be seen on the faces of the people. Can you guess that town? Oh yes, it is Saxton. "What good thing can come out of Saxton?" "Come and see." Where has there existed for nearly a twelvemonth an organization that stood for "No License" and for a man who was not afraid to stand on the same platform? At Saxton. What organization within the county sent thousands of sheets of temperance literature throughout the county at its own labor and expense to carry this election for "No License"? It was the Saxton Temperance Organization. What W. C. T. U. wrote with their own hands five hundred souvenir postal cards to individual voters urging them to vote for Huff? The Saxton Local Union, of course. Where did the men come from who held more meetings in the interest of "No License" throughout the county than any other company of men within the county? From Saxton. Where did the men come from, who at the county conferences took care that our agitational forces did not get over into the politician's band wagon? From Saxton.

When rumor was current that Huff was the weaker man and Foor the stronger because the latter belonged to the majority party and forsooth that party was practically a unit in support of their nominee, who had knowledge and courage to say, "The Republican organization is woefully divided and their candidate will be done to the death?" The men from Saxton joined by the men from Everett. The bomb, the very best the enemy could secure, was exploded and the Huff men were blown up into the air but they came down everywhere.

I write to plead for justice. If men who were wrong are now busy apologizing why not give credit where credit is due? Everett joined hands with us and for the last ten days did nothing but service for the good cause but when the reward of honor is prepared and the awards distributed I insist upon it that the town and its organization that put hard cash, brains, energy and courage into this campaign deserves its full share of credit for the success that was achieved. Saxton saw from the beginning that the man who would win for "No License" must not trust his cause in the hands of the party organization alone for they had other interests and other masters and would give half-hearted support. So back of Mr. Huff stood an independent temperance organization managed by men who knew a few things and were willing to work hard at home and abroad. When you are figuring on the elements that led to victory do not forget that the Saxton organization was no small factor in bringing about that result. Saxton wants not all the credit but "they have rights who dare maintain them." We are willing to let the honors go around but we want our just share.

"For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct bears along Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong; Whether conscious or unconscious, yet Humanity's vast frame Through its ocean-sundered fibres feels the gust of joy or shame;—In the gain or loss of one race all the rest have equal claim."

Adieu, "Justice."

Mr. Nicholson Explains
Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 8, 1909.
Editor Bedford Gazette.
Dear Sir—In your issue of November 5th I notice a half-column editorial entitled "The Anti-Saloon League." The whole article is such a veritable fabrication and misrepresentation of the position of the League that I cannot fail to condemn it as such.

It is hard to realize that there is any one in Bedford County who could have so misunderstood the position of the Anti-Saloon League. The League at no time took the position that Mr. Huff should withdraw. Soon after the primary one of the most intimate friends of Mr. Huff, in talking with the State Superintendent about the possibility of an independent candidate, said that if real danger should arise he thought he might have some influence in getting Mr. Huff to resign if it seemed to be necessary, but it was agreed that that question did not enter into the campaign, and certainly not at that time. Later when Mr. Bair was announced the State Superintendent had several letters from ministers and others in Bedford County asking that the League use its influence to get Mr. Huff to resign. The League absolutely took no position on the question until it could have a conference and find out what the real situation was. It is a matter of knowledge to several people that before the conference at Bedford on October 25th the Superintendent said to different persons in Bedford County that he doubted whether or not it was best for either man to withdraw; that in that case more votes would probably go to Mr. Bair than to the remaining candidate. The State Superintendent went to the conference on October 25th with that opinion, but was determined to get all the facts in the case if possible, and find out by consulting both sides what was best from the no-license standpoint. The League had absolutely no interest in the matter except the success of the no-license cause.

In the Keystone Citizen, under date of October 29th, the Superintendent took this position:

"The Anti-Saloon League has investigated to the fullest extent the situation, and as between Mr. Foor and Mr. Huff it can announce no choice." * * * Finally on election day let every vote be gotten out for Mr. Foor and Mr. Huff, and see that no illegal vote is cast for Mr. Bair, and Bedford County will be ready to enter the no-license column."

That same week the Superintendent sent letters to every pastor in the county, the last paragraph of which began as follows:

"Finally, allow me to suggest that you and other friends of no-license in your community make sure that some of the friends of no-license are at the polls all day on election day, and that every vote possible, either for Mr. Foor or Mr. Huff, be gotten to the polls."

I have no doubt that some of the best friends of the League in the county were for Mr. Huff and worked for him strenuously just as there were other ardent friends of the League that thought Mr. Foor was the stronger candidate, and worked for him accordingly.

I am not ignorant of the fact that certain persons in Bedford County seemed to regard it as a duty to misrepresent the position of the Anti-Saloon League. You have evidently been misled by these statements. I am sure, however, that your sense of fairness will lead you to give full space to this statement in view of the remarkable editorial which appeared in your columns last week.

Allow me to say, in conclusion, that the Anti-Saloon League has only one purpose in Bedford County, as in every other county in the state, and that is to advance the cause of the people and of the home against the iniquitous saloon.

Very cordially yours,
S. E. Nicholson,
State Supt.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Swindled Four Wives

Lucian Pickett, who is accused of having married four women and absconded with several hundred dollars of their money, also money of women to whom he became engaged, was convicted in the United States District Court at Cleveland, O., this week on the charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud. The court has power to sentence him to four and one-half years in the penitentiary and a fine of $1,500.

Pickett's four wives were in court, as were some of the girls to whom he had promised marriage. The testimony showed that Pickett invariably borrowed money from his wives or prospective wives for the purposes of entering upon a business deal. His wives were Emma Miller of Mazon, Ill.; Georgia Walters of Cossna, Bedford County, Pa.; Ellen E. Newton of Albany, N. Y., and Lulu Emrick of New York City.

Prothonotary Guyer of this place was called as a witness and presented the record of license issued to Pickett and Miss Walters.

The Incident That Ended His Period of Probation.

By CLARICE ENGLE.
(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

A man picked his way slowly along the sun baked trail that led westward to Taggart across the desert. It was high noon and the day had been hot and dry and the man's throat was parched with thirst. This did not tend to lessen his ferocious aspect nor to soften the anger that glowed in his eyes. It was all due to his visit that morning to the little ranch a few miles behind, for there he had met with the first failure in his life. He had proposed and been rejected.

It was not Bill Warren's nature to be balked by anything. He usually carried matters his own way and with a high hand, as a result of which he was looked upon as a sort of local "bad man." But this cognomen was applied to him only by people who did not know Bill. In reality no better nor kinder natured man than he ever rode into Taggart.

But Sue Patterson was one of those who were not intimately acquainted with Warren, and this assertiveness she looked upon as something evil. Therefore, although otherwise she liked Warren better than any other of her admirers, she felt that she was acting quite right when she rejected his offer of marriage.

All the consolation that she had given him in answer to his earnest pleading was that she would put him on an indefinite probation and if he came through it with flying colors why—she would think about it.

All of which Warren took too literally, and he thought that she had spoken thus only to soften her refusal. He became angry at the thought of it. "She don't care nothin' for me," he muttered savagely, "an' I know why. It's all along of that sneakin' coyote, Ralph Henderson. Been to Frisco an' seen a few things an' comes out here to lord it over us. I know the brand. She's plumb loco over the cuss, too, an' he ain't no man. No," he finished spitefully, "he ain't no man."

He rode on across the desert in a sort of dazed consciousness, with his hat pulled well down over his eyes. At length, toward the middle of the afternoon, he came into the foothills. Before him lay the Tooth of Time, the largest mountain in that vicinity. Beyond it, ten miles to the westward, was Taggart. This necessitated his taking the trail that wound round the slope of the mountain. This trail was hardly more than a well trodden footpath and was only wide enough to permit a single rider upon it. One side of it sloped up at an angle of almost eighty degrees. The other formed the side of a precipice that dropped a sheer 200 feet to the sandy ravine below.

As he rode over the trail, lost in thought, Warren was dead to external sounds. He did not notice the fidgeting of his horse nor his frightened whinnies. He had no intimation whatever that any one was approaching along the trail from the opposite direction. And yet not a hundred feet ahead of him a horse and rider were rounding the curve of the mountain. Neither noticed the other until they were fifty feet apart. Then by some strange intuition both raised their heads. Recognition was mutual and instantaneous, for the man ahead of Warren was Ralph Henderson.

The faces of both men paled with fear. Not in years had two men met on that narrow trail, and it seemed some strange intervention of destiny that it should be Warren and Henderson. While the face of the cattleman grew anxious, that of Henderson became quickly overshot with a crafty cunning.

"Hello!" he drawled pleasantly. "Hello!" muttered Warren nervously. "Well, what are we going to do about it?" the city man continued. "It looks as if you'd have to go back."

"Not by a—sight!" snapped Warren. "There's no turning about for either of us. We'll have to manage to pass each other. The place seems pretty wide here."

"Flip a coin for the inner side," suggested the other, suddenly reaching a hand into his pocket.

"Right," agreed Warren, "but let's have a look at it first."

Henderson's face turned scarlet and he staved his hand. "I declare, I'm all out of coin," he rattled sheepishly.

"Here's an eagle," replied Warren, with narrow eyes. "Heave her up! Heads I pass on the inside, tails I pass on the outside."

He tossed the coin to Henderson as he spoke who, pale faced and hesitating, fumbled with it a moment and let it fly up into the air with a twirl of a veteran trickster. It fell down on the trail at their feet, ringing out clear and cold.

"Tails!" cried the city man, overcome with excitement. His face resumed something of its natural color and the old craftiness stole into his eyes.

Warren accepted his fate nonchalantly, although he knew that it might mean death for him. There was one thing about it, however, that galled him. He well knew that Henderson was on his way to the Patterson ranch, and it came to him as a rather bitter thought that he might have to play the martyr and sacrifice his own life in order that the man could do so. But without a word he pressed his pony's ribs with his heels and rode forward.

Henderson had drawn his horse as close as he could against the side of the mountain, but he seemed overtaken by fits of nervousness, for the reins shook in his hands and the color came and went in his dark cheeks.

The ledge where Warren would have to pass Henderson was somewhat wider than the rest of the trail, and he rode forward light hearted and confident that he would easily accomplish it. But just as he brushed against the side of Henderson the latter suddenly drove his spurs with great force against his horse's ribs. With a snort of terror the animal plunged madly forward, dislodging the other horse and rider and sending them hurtling down and over the edge of the precipice. Then he went careening down the slope.

The breath went out of Warren as soon as he felt himself falling, and under the sickening sensation that ensued he lost consciousness. A stinging pain in his leg finally awoke him. Bruised and bleeding, he now sat up and gazed about him. He had landed in the branches of a tree that jutted out from the slope of the mountain. Down below on the sand he could see the form of his horse, dead as a stone.

The first thing Warren did was to swear. Then he looked to his leg. It had been broken just below the knee. As he started to wrap his handkerchief about it he heard a sound from above. Over the rim of the precipice a bushy head was peering.

"Hello!" it called. "Kin ye manage ef I send down a rope?"

"Sure," Warren yelled back.

A minute later the end of a larlet came whirling down through space. Warren caught it, made it fast about his body, and then, clinging to it with both hands, ordered the man above to hoist away. A few moments later he crawled up over the ledge and lay panting for breath at old Jem Patterson's feet.

"I seen the hull thing, Bill," began the latter as he undid the rope about the man's body. "Henderson will swing for this or I'll shoot him on sight. I was comin' along a mite behind him an' I seen him jab the buckskin and then scoot." But Warren was unconscious before the man finished speaking, and Patterson lifted him up on his pony after great difficulty and started down the trail for home.

When Warren next regained consciousness he was lying on a bed in a dimly lighted room. Soft hands were bandaging his head and soothing words fell from the lips of their owner. Warren opened his eyes and took in the situation at a glance.

"Sue," he demanded fiercely, "has that skunk been here?"

"Sh!" she murmured, touching a finger to his lips. "He has not been here. Evidently he has skipped the country. Father has told me all about it—the honorable way in which you acted and Henderson's treachery. You have indeed behaved splendidly."

"Sue!" cried the man eagerly, starting up.

"Be quiet," she admonished smilingly. Then she added, "Your probation is over, and you have come through it nobly."

And then Warren claimed his own.

Builder of the Great Wall of China.

To superstitious notions Chin added the lust of luxury, his life being a blaze of oriental magnificence. He built a wonderful palace, which has been described in the Imperial History as having certain gorgeous annexes attached at intervals, the whole extending over a distance of a hundred miles. In consequence of his life of luxury perhaps he became more and more a prey to superstition, and it may be that because of this he completed the Great wall. At any rate, history records that he was informed by prophecy that in time he would be overwhelmed and destroyed by outside enemies. So he mobilized an army of 300,000 men to work on the Great wall and if necessary to fight in its behalf. Chin's design evidently was to inclose his massive empire in a rampart which should have the shape of a horseshoe, with the heel corks at the ocean shore. He did not plan to parallel the coast with a wall, doubtless considering that seaside an ample protection to a country vast and densely populated. The wall is not for modern use. It is an ancient fossil, the largest fossil on the earth. But fossils are useful and truthful. It is a dividing line between two civilizations and between two eras. In space it cut off the herdsmen of the north from the tillers of the south.—William Edgar Geil in Harper's.

Why She Was Glad.

A young Louisville man who was out west not long ago has returned, telling a yarn which he admits is not at his own expense, but which he declares to be about one of the most interesting experiences of even his checkered career.

"I was walking along the street in a western town," he said, "when suddenly across the way I saw a Louisville girl whom I recognized immediately. She saw me, too, and I expected her to bow rather coolly and distantly, as had been her wont back home. I was considerably astonished therefore, when she dashed across the street, seized me with both hands and fairly bubbled over in her delight. I was so surprised, in fact, that I commented on it.

"'I'm glad to see you, too,' I said when I had managed to extricate myself from her exuberant greeting. 'but, to tell you the truth, I hadn't expected to see you so excited over my appearance. You always treated me rather a la iceberg at home, you know. What has caused your change of heart?'

"She was nonplused for only a moment and then explained, 'Mr. Smith, I've been away from home so long that I'd be glad to see even a dog if he came from Kentucky.'

"I let it go at that."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Home-Made Fire Extinguishers

A simple fire extinguisher may be made at home, and if kept always on hand, will sometimes prove of great value. Take twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of salamoniac or nitrate of ammonia, which can be bought at any drug store. Dissolve these in seven gallons of water. Put in thin glass bottles holding a quart each, cork tightly, and seal to prevent evaporation. When a fire breaks out, throw one of these bottles so that it will break in or near the flames, or if this is not possible, break off the neck of the bottle and scatter the contents on the fire. This has been tested. Sometimes it is necessary to use several bottles—Home Department, November National Magazine.

Home Course In Live Stock Farming

I.—Fences.

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture," "Making Money on the Farm," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

ONE of the most important parts of the equipment for live stock farming is a good system of fences. Poor fences cause breachy stock and endless trouble. In the case of horses a wire cut due to a poor fence will often mean a large enough loss to pay for several rods of good fence.

Woven wire is unquestionably the best fencing material. It is slightly, durable and efficient. The expense is higher than for barbed wire, but this can be cut down by making only the lower part of the fence of woven wire and using barbed wire for the upper part. The strip of woven wire should be from two to three feet in height, with two or three barbed wires on top. This makes a fence that will turn any kind of stock from pigs to horses. There is little danger of a horse getting into such a fence and getting out. Where much stock is kept it will pay to have the entire farm fenced with this or some other kind of fence that is hog or sheep tight. It is not a question of whether you can afford it or not; it is a question of whether you can afford not to do it. It will probably not be possible to fence all the farm in one year, but the work should be done as rapidly as possible. The extra feed the hogs and sheep will pick up will pay the entire cost of fencing in a very few years.

Cement Posts.

The first part of the fence to be put up is the posts. The time for putting up cheap posts that will rot out and need renewal in three or four years is past. There are two ways of securing lasting posts—making them of cement and treating wooden posts with creosote. Cement posts are not hard to make. The first step is to make a wooden mold of the proper size. About six inches square at the bottom, tapering to four at the top, is a very good size. Three cornered strips should be placed in the bottom of the molds to make the corners of the posts rounded. A number of molds can be built side by side, so that several posts can be made at once. The best mixture for cement posts is one part portland cement, two and one-half parts clean, sharp sand and five parts gravel. The sand and cement should be mixed dry. Then add water and mix to a thick mortar. After this is well mixed spread it out in a thin layer and spread the required amount of gravel over it. Mix the whole mass well by shoveling over several times.

The inside of the molds should be greased with soft soap to keep the cement from sticking. Spread about one and one-half inches of concrete over the bottom and tamp it well. Near each corner lay a steel wire lengthwise of the post. These reinforcing wires should be fairly heavy, but will not need to be galvanized, as the concrete will keep them from rusting. They should be looped at the end to prevent slipping. Now add concrete up to within an inch of the top of the mold, tamp again and put in two more reinforcing wires. Fill the mold to the top, tamp and round off the upper corners. Long staples with the points bent a little to keep them from pulling out should be stuck into the cement at the places where the wires are to be fastened. After the posts are set the wires can be fastened to these staples by a small piece of soft wire twisted through them.

After the cement has partially set it should be covered with sand to keep it from drying out too rapidly. The posts should be sprinkled at least once a day for a week, when they may be taken from the molds and stored away in moist sand to cure. It takes sixty days for a cement post to cure properly, and it should not be set before that time. In the meantime the sand should be kept moist by occasional sprinklings. The cost of material for cement posts the size mentioned and seven feet long is not more than 25 cents a post, not counting the labor. When once in place they will last practically forever.

The method of treating wooden fence-posts with creosote is very simple and inexpensive. Any kind of post is suitable for use with this treatment—indeed, the poorest soft wood posts last the longest after being properly treated. The apparatus needed consists of two small metal tanks, one of which is arranged so that a fire can be built under it. Both tanks are filled two-thirds full of creosote, which can be bought by the barrel at reasonable rates. The creosote in one of these tanks is heated almost to boiling, and the posts, which must be well seasoned, are placed in it and left for about six hours. Usually only the part of the post that is to go into the ground is treated.

C. V. GREGORY

After remaining in the hot creosote for six hours the posts are taken out and immediately placed in the cold creosote. The sudden reduction of temperature causes the steam in the pores of the post to contract, making a partial vacuum, and the air pressure drives the creosote into all parts of the post. This treatment costs only about 10 cents a post. The treated posts will last twenty years or longer, or about five times as long as untreated ones.

In putting up a permanent woven wire fence great care must be taken to see that the corner posts are well braced. Fig. 1 shows a very effective way of making a solid corner. The corner post should be considerably larger than the others. A hole 2 by 4 should be dug to set it in. Bolt a piece of plank about three feet long to the bottom of the post and a shorter piece at right angles to the first. Fill in dirt up to the top of these and tamp it solid. Then roll in a number of large stones and fill the rest of the hole with dirt, tamping it well all the way up. Such a post, if properly braced, will not give much under any strain that may be put upon it. A way that is still better, though a little more expensive, is to set the corner post in cement.

The fencing selected should be strongly woven and made of good sized wire. Flimsy fencing costs a little less at first, but does not last well enough to warrant putting it up. Be sure that the cross wires are fastened firmly to the longitudinal strands, so that they cannot be spread out of place. Both the woven and the barbed wire should be well galvanized. Wire that is galvanized after weaving, as shown by the crevices and joints being filled with the galvanizing material, will last much longer than that which is galvanized before weaving. In the latter case the galvanizing material will be more or less cracked, and the wire will soon begin to rust.

It is of great importance to have the wire well stretched. An ordinary wire stretcher will not stretch woven wire tightly enough. Where a large quantity is purchased at a time a powerful wire stretcher is usually thrown in. It will pay to set a temporary post a little way back from the corner to stretch from. The wire should be wrapped around the corner post and fastened in several places, as the strain here is very heavy. If there are more than twenty rods in a single line it will be necessary to brace a line post midway between the corners to stretch from, as more than twenty rods cannot be tightened satisfactorily at one stretch.

Wherever a gate is to be put in the posts will have to be braced solidly. A good way to do this is to put in posts that will extend about twelve feet above the ground and connect the tops with a strong wire. This method of bracing cannot be used with cement posts, as they will not stand much lateral strain.

A swinging gate is by far the most convenient, provided it is properly put in. It should be well enough braced so that it will not sag and drag on the ground. In places where the snow is likely to drift a gate that can be adjusted to various heights is a great convenience. Fig. 2 shows a convenient and easily constructed type of wooden gate. For road gates and at other places where appearance counts for anything an iron gate is preferable. It looks better and is more durable, but the cost is considerably greater.

A NOBLE REVENGE

'Twas a cold and dreary morning and the snow was falling fast; A funeral train was passing 'mid December's wintry blast; A little boy was weeping and his sobs would not be stilled,

For with his darling mother was the rude pine coffin filled. They stood beside the open grave, fast fell his bitter tears; No loving hand to guide him now, no gentle words he hears,

His only friend lies cold and still beneath the coffin lid And soon forever from his sight her sweet face would be hid.

He called aloud in piteous tones, "Oh, mother dear, come back, Your boy is crying, hungry, cold; your loving words I lack, You must not, must not go away; oh, mother, mother, dear; For without you what can I do? It is so cold and drear."

The undertaker grasped the boy and drove him from the grave, No hand the weeping, trembling one from his rude hand to save; No loving one beside him stood to wipe his tears away; A homeless, friendless, little one this cold December day.

Cold and colder blew the blast and faster fell the snow; This little child in his distress had nowhere now to go; Oh! weep ye plying angels and break these hearts of stone That bid him on his dismal night depart alone, alone.

The years rolled on as ceaselessly as they are wont to go, A score of times our mother earth was whitened with the snow; A prisoner stood before the dock charged with a bitter crime, Friendless and alone was he, besmeared with prison grime.

The judge spoke out, "Is no one here who for this man will plead; We know he's guilty of the crime, should suffer for the deed; Won't some one be his counsel to stay the raging storm That on his aged head must fall with angry with'ring scorn?"

Out stepped a stranger from the crowd, "I will defend the man, I knew him once, your honor," his speech he then began; He plead so honestly, earnestly, feelingly, so low, The jury soon decided that the prisoner might go.

Up spoke the prisoner to the man whose talent made him free, "Who are you, friend, for well I know I owe my life to thee?" "Nay, nay, my friend, you owe me naught, my name I will not say, But I'm the boy you basely drove from mother's grave away."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 14, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxviii, 11-31. Memory Verses, 30, 31—Golden Text, Rom. i, 16—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After three months at Malta of testifying of the Lord Jesus, the result of which eternity will declare, they proceeded toward Rome, tarrying three days at Syracuse, in Sicily, one day at Rhegium, in the extreme south of Italy, and seven days at Puteoli, where they found believers. The brethren at Rome, having heard of Paul's arrival at Puteoli, came out to meet him as far as Appii forum and the three taverns, thus encouraging him and causing thanksgiving to God. Then they returned with him to Rome. There is a suggestion here of the way it will be at the coming of the Lord. When He comes to the air and later be manifested with Him in glory, when He shall come to the same Olivet from which He ascended (1 Thess. iv, 16-18; Col. iii, 4; Zech. xiv, 4). Arriving at Rome, the other prisoners were delivered to the captain of the guard, but Paul was permitted to dwell by himself with a soldier who kept him. For two whole years he dwelt in his own hired house and received all that came to him, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with the most perfect freedom (16, 30, 31). We shall meditate more fully on this delightful occupation presently. After three days in Rome Paul called the chief of the Jews together that he might state his case to them, which he briefly did in facts with which we are already familiar, and he added, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (20).

In Joel iii, 16, we read that in the time of trouble the Lord will be the hope of His people and the strength of the children of Israel. In 1 Tim. i, 1, Paul says that he is an apostle of Jesus Christ by the commandment of God our Saviour and Lord Jesus Christ our hope, but in the New Testament I think we are safe in saying that "hope" always refers to the coming of Christ for His saints, as in Tit. ii, 13; Heb. vi, 18-20; Rom. viii, 23-25. The hope of Israel would then be the coming of Christ as Israel's Messiah to make of them a righteous nation and bless all nations through them. This implies Jesus, as the seed of David, risen from the dead, and also the resurrection of the saints according to Dan. xii, 1, 2. When Paul stated his case before these Jews of Rome they said that they had not heard of his troubles in Jerusalem, nor had any one spoken any harm of him, but they would like to hear what he had to say about this sect, which they knew was everywhere spoken against (22). It was foretold that it would be so (Ps. cxviii, 22; Isa. viii, 14, 15; Luke ii, 34), and to this day it is so, for our Lord is still rejected and by the world disowned, but the strange thing is that, even among those who accept the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour and expect to spend eternity with Him and are with more or less zeal seeking to serve Him now, there is such antipathy to anything concerning His second coming or the future of Israel as a righteous nation to bring blessing to all nations.

It may truly be said that as the hope of His church or the hope of Israel He is still spoken against by those who, like these Jews, profess to honor His word. Well, they appointed him a day and came to his lodging, and from morning till evening he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets (23). For two years he continued to do this with all who came to him. He had but one topic—the Lord Jesus Christ and His kingdom. He had but one book—the Scriptures. If the Scriptures are not wholly and absolutely reliable, then preachers are simply lecturers, talking out of their own hearts their own messages, which are all vain words, for, apart from the word of God, which is forever settled in heaven (Ps. cxix, 89), we have no revelation of the will of God and the purpose of God; but, thank God, there are many left who, like Paul, believe God that all things shall be just as He has told us and who, like our blessed Lord, find in all the Scriptures, the law, the prophets and the Psalms, the things concerning Himself (Luke xxiv, 27, 44). The teacher of the Bible should be able to begin at Moses and from all the book point out the predictions concerning the sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow as they are set forth in shadow and symbol and in plain statements. Gen. iii, 15, has both in one verse; Gen. iii, 21, is full of the sufferings and the benefit to us; Gen. iii, 24, talks of the resurrection and the glory.

The story of Abel tells us in type of suffering and of the blood that speaketh better things than that of Abel. The story of Enoch, in the light of the epistle of Jude, tells of suffering and of the glory of translation. In Noah and Lot we learn, with our Lord's comment, of the judgments which must precede the kingdom. In Abraham and his son we see the great sacrifice and learn to look for the city. Joseph helps us to be patient and to believe that every step, however great the darkness, is a step toward the throne.

Making Money On the Farm

XVIII.—The Vegetable Garden

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture"
Copyright, 1929, by American Press Association.

A GOOD vegetable garden will produce at least half of the family's living during the summer months, to say nothing of the vegetables that may be canned or stored in the cellar for winter use. Many farmers object to a garden as causing too much work. That is largely because they make it so. The largest item of work is hoeing, and if the garden is properly planned and managed little of that will need to be done. The mistake most often made is in the location of the garden. It is put in a little corner back of the house where there is no room to use horse tools. It is much better to plant a few fruit trees in such a space and locate the garden some place where it can be worked by horsepower.

Securing Early Vegetables.

A south slope is best if early vegetables are wanted. A sandy soil is also a big help in getting things started early, but almost any soil may be made to give good results by draining and manuring. Fall plowing is a necessary step in getting the garden planned early. Then as soon as it is dry enough to work in the spring it should be disked and harrowed until the best possible seed bed is produced. Earliness is a prime essential in a vegetable garden. One of the main satisfactions in having a garden is in being able to send a mess of peas or a watermelon to the neighbors before they have any of their own. Then, too, the family begins to get hungry for green stuff usually long before there is any for use.

Besides having light, early soil, a south slope and preparing the ground early, there are a number of other devices that can be resorted to to secure earliness. One of the most important of these is the hotbed. A hotbed costs little, and after its advantages have once been found out by actual trial it is seldom abandoned. The best location for a hotbed is on the south side of a building. It should face the south in order to get the most possible heat from the sun. The main source of heat, however, is fermenting horse manure. A pit may be dug for the manure, but the hotbed will be just as successful if the manure is piled on top of the ground. The pile should be about two feet deep and should be spread out flat and packed tightly. It should extend out about two feet each way from the frame that is to be used. The manure used should have the proper proportions of straw and moisture, so that it will be springy, but not too loose.

It is a fact that much of the success of the hotbed depends on the proper condition of this heat supply. If the manure is too far advanced in decomposition the fermentation will not be active enough to generate the proper amount of heat. On the other hand, if active fermentation has not already begun the necessary heat will not be on hand when it is wanted, and germination and growth will be altogether too slow. A little careful attention to this matter will prevent disappointment.

The frame may be of any desired size, according to the size of glass that can be secured. A storm window makes a good top for a hotbed. If no glass can be secured a sash covered with muslin may be used. The frame should be about eight inches deep in front and fourteen behind. As soon as the manure has been packed in place the frame should be placed upon it and about five inches of rich soil placed inside. The best way to get this soil is to store it away in a barrel the fall before, as you will want it long before the ground thaws in the spring.

Managing the Hotbed.

The proper time to start the hotbed is about six weeks before the ground outside will be ready for planting. About three days after the hotbed has been started the temperature will have become uniform, and the seeds can be planted. They can be planted thickly, since they are to be taken up before they have made much growth. The principal plants started in a hotbed are cabbages and tomatoes. Lettuce and radishes may also be grown in the hotbed and if planted thinly enough may be left there until they are large enough to use. If you want a few early melons or cucumbers the seed may be planted in strawberry boxes of dirt and placed in the hotbed. When the weather is sufficiently warm outside they may be set out in the garden. The roots will make their way through the sides of the box, and three or four weeks will be saved. This is a clever device for treating early sowings of plants which do not bear transplanting. Started in this way early in the season they may be transferred, box and all, into the garden bed and suffer no setback.

During cold nights the hotbed should be covered with straw or old carpets to keep it from getting too cold inside. On sunny days the sash may have to be raised during the warmer part of the day to give ventilation. The plants should be watered in the morning on warm days only to prevent too great a reduction of temperature.

A cold frame is almost as necessary as a hotbed. The plants raised in a hotbed are very tender and are liable to be injured if transplanted directly to the garden. The cold frame is made the same as a hotbed except that no manure is used. After the plants have obtained a good start in the hotbed they should be transferred to the cold frame. The plants in the cold frame are gradually accustomed to the outside air by leaving the sash up for longer periods each day. This transplanting also helps the tomatoes and cabbages in another way, in that it makes them thicker stemmed and causes better root development. A stocky plant of this kind is always a better grower and kinder.

Early Potatoes.

A good way to secure earliness in the case of potatoes is to pack a number in sand somewhere where they will get plenty of light. This should be done a week or so before planting time. As soon as the ground is ready these tubers are set out carefully so as not to break off the sprouts which have started. A week or more in the earliness of the crop can be saved in this way. The early potatoes may be planted rather shallow and a thick coating of straw placed between the rows. On nights when there is danger of freezing, the plants can be covered with straw. No cultivation will be necessary, since the straw will keep the weeds down and conserve moisture. When digging time comes the straw can be thrown back and the potatoes will be found on top of the ground, or nearly so. Of course this plan is not practicable except for a few rows of the earliest potatoes.

Rhubarb and Asparagus.

Another method of securing early vegetables is by the use of perennials, or those which come up from the roots each year. The most important of these are asparagus and rhubarb. Asparagus is one of the most delicious vegetables that can be grown, and it fills in a space in the spring when there is nothing else available. Rhubarb comes nearer to being a fruit, making appetizing sauce and pies.

In starting an asparagus bed the land should be manured heavily and plowed deeply. One year old plants grown from seed should be planted four inches deep and a foot apart in rows.

three feet apart. The early spring treatment of the asparagus bed consists in giving it a thorough disking. After the cutting season is over a liberal coating of manure should be scattered between the rows. The stalks should be cut in the fall before the berries are fully ripe to keep the bed from becoming filled with seedlings. Asparagus cannot be cut much before it is three years old. Rhubarb is easily grown from roots planted around in any out of the way corner and kept well mulched and manured.

In planting the garden those plants which have the same habits of growth should be put together. The early crops should also be bunched as much as possible. In some cases an early crop may be got out of the way in time to put a later one on the same ground.

Cultivation.

The garden should be laid out in long rows and as much of the cultivation as possible done with a horse cultivator. A one horse walking cultivator is best for this work. A wheel hoe to get close to the plants and into the corners is a valuable addition to the equipment. As a last resort a hand hoe may have to be used once in awhile to get the weeds out of the row. Changing the garden to a new place every few years is a big help in keeping weeds in check. If the garden is put on clean soil in the first place and few weeds are allowed to go to seed the labor problem will be greatly simplified.

Insects.

Of all the insects that attack garden crops the one that probably causes the most trouble is the striped cucumber beetle. A practice often followed where but a few hills of vine crops are grown is to cover the young plants with a frame of mosquito netting. A better plan is to knock the beetles to the ground by a slight blow and kill each one with a drop of kerosene. Sprinkling the plants with pepper, tobacco dust or air slaked lime will help some.

Paris green, applied at the rate of one pound to a hundred gallons of water, with four pounds of freshly slaked lime added to prevent injury to the foliage, is one of the best remedies for cabbage worms and most of the other insects that infest garden crops. The big tomato worms can best be killed by knocking them off into a can of kerosene.

SEVENTH AMENDMENT KILLED

Remainder Ratified--Statement Made at Office of Secretary.

Harrisburg, Pa., November 10.—The statement was made at the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth at the capitol tonight that the constitutional amendments, with the exception of the seventh, had been ratified by the voters of the state.

This statement, while not official, was based upon a computation of the returns filed up to 8 o'clock and long-distance telephone statements of the counts made in Philadelphia, Allegheny, Berks and Armstrong Counties.

With these counties to hear from the first amendment had a majority against it of 30,244. The majority in the counties of Philadelphia, Allegheny and Berks will overcome that and leave from 5,000 to 8,000 to spare in the estimate of some attaches of the department. The majorities against the other amendments, except the seventh, range from 32,760 against the fourth, to 22,580 against the fifth. The schedule on the same basis has a majority against it of 34,478. It is believed that the schedule will also be adopted.

No hope is held out for the seventh. Without the four counties mentioned it has 79,302 majority against it.

Resolutions of Respect

At a regular meeting of Bedford Grange, No. 619, P. of H., the following resolutions on the death of Brother H. D. Tate were adopted:

Whereas, Death has again entered our ranks and has removed from our midst our worthy Brother and co-worker, Hon. H. D. Tate, and

Whereas, In the death of our distinguished brother our Grange has lost one of its loyal members and his family a kind and loving husband and father,

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family of our deceased Brother our sincere sympathy in this their bereavement, assuring them that while we deeply deplore his sudden death we believe an all-wise Providence can make even an affliction like this turn to the good of them that love Him;

Resolved, That this action be placed upon the minutes of our order and that our lodge room be draped in mourning for a period of sixty days;

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be handed to the bereaved family and that they be published in the county papers.

Something to Admire

There is something about the beautiful writing papers "Made in Berkshire" by that both attracts and interests the person examining them. The beautiful textures and finishes of the papers themselves and the neat, artistic way in which they are put up are features that appeal strongly to the lover of the beautiful.

The Eaton, Crane & Pike writing papers are the best that America produces, and America produces the best. If you are not using these papers you owe it to yourself and your friends to adopt them.
